Frustrated by: The Result of Slow Response Times From Your IT Support Provider

Overview

The time it takes for your IT support company to respond to your issues is one of the most important attributes of any IT support company.

The impact of slow response times can be varied and wide-ranging. In this post, we investigate the impact that a slow response time can have on your business.

Check List

-  Revenue
-  New Customers
-  Onboards
-  Budget Planning

Why IT Response Matters

Impact of slow IT response

1. Inactive employees cost money, can't make revenue and are a distraction. Once you hire an MSP, you can be expected to receive a wide array of services with a broader skill base, the promise of 24/7 client support, and the assurance of quality service as outlined in the Service Level Agreement.
2. Frustrated employees can experience a drop in morale. Replacing an MSP is easier than replacing an in-house IT team if the level of service doesn't meet your requirements or expectations.
3. Slow response times can mean a poor experience for your customers too.
